We take a look at it in this review The Hercules Universal DJ is a small and thin controller, just a bit larger than my 13" MacBook Pro. 4014 Hercules Wave M3 Djay Download Hercules debuted two new DJ-focused products at this year's CES: The DJControlWave, a wireless controller aimed specifically at iPad DJs, and the WAE NEO, which is a Bluetooth speaker. Bluetooth means you can get away from the DJ booth and onto the dancefloor as far as 10 metres away, however the DJControlWave is strictly a controller, meaning there's no sound card built in.

Moreover, this means that you'd have to use the supplied splitter cable if you want to preview tracks in your headphones as opposed to connecting your cans to the DJControlWave, which might seem to be a step back for some. There are also two knobs for basic loop control, and a large master knob to control your volume. You'd have to use your iPad's headphone out socket as an output, so technically your iPad's still connected to your sound system unless you're using Bluetooth speakers (the WAE NEO seems to be an ideal companion).
